It takes far more than just a love of music to be able to work in the field, but passion is also extremely important. Vocal exercises have several purposes, including [14] warming up the voice; extending the vocal range; "lining up" the voice horizontally and vertically; and acquiring vocal techniques such as legato, staccato, control of dynamics, rapid figurations, learning to sing wide intervals comfortably, singing trills, singing melismas and correcting vocal faults. Visually, I loved the range of ages, body types, energies, and skin colors on the stage: your differences made it all the more powerful when you came together as a group.
