We all do from time to time. It has to be real—involving patients, understanding their wants and needs and fears, their ideas, concerns and expectations. Disconnect rather than lead. What would it take to develop consistency of practice within the care team? We can blame the target—but what has happened to professionals who take more note of the target than of compassion? How can we create environments where all patients are given this type of individualised care?

You see the degree of their disrespect in how often they ask you opinion, run work the side that will get you noticed for the wrong reasons. It is amazing how much gratitude plays into avoiding poor behavior and wrong thinking.
