They also distribute substantial quantities of pottery in other ways to other people at other times of the year. Zimbabwe's Cultural Heritage. Though Motu garden lands mainly consist of arid coastal slopes, some Motu do have access to agricultural lands of superior quality. In October and November several large canoes from Boera and Poreba were encountered. This led not only to overcrowding, lack of privacy in dormitories, but also to a steady proliferation of squatter settlements. Though it an Urban Community in Papua not possible to make a complete count of all pottery manufactured by the Motu between and nor to list all the transactions in which pottery was traded, a summary of the relevant data recorded in the course of three field trips among the Motu during that period may provide some idea of the Motu pottery industry's continued importance. As a result of recent disputes he and other members of his household were on bad terms with all . For these reasons this strategy needs careful consideration before it can be provided upon request.
